ARTS & CULTURE

Nature Poetry of Mary Oliver

This online course will celebrate the work of Mary Oliver, who is one of America's premier nature poets. She spent a lifetime deeply considering such topics as presence, life, loss, grace, silence, and longing. Additional class material will cover subjects such as beauty, transformation, the wonder of animals, and poetry as a form of meditation. Mary Oliver's voice made a unique contribution to American poetry. Come join us as we experience the magic of her heartfelt verse. The book Devotions by Mary Oliver is the course text and will be the touchstone of our discussion sessions.

Writing - Write What you Know

"Write what you know!" We hear that all of the time but what does that mean? It is not that complex, or simple, as you might think. This idea translates to many genres from sci-fi, fantasy to realistic fiction. Come learn tips, tricks and writing strategies to help you write down your stories!

Can't make the class? Sign up and we will send you the class materials, recording and presentation slides to help you get started!

5/15 | 10:00 am – 1:00 pm | Sunday (1) | Fee: $39 | Rebecca Demarest | Online

Writing - Creating Sci-Fi Stories

Creating Sci-Fi from your life experiences! When we hear "science fiction" we often think of space ships, aliens, and laser beams. What it really means is writing a story that couldn't happen without the technology involved, to show us something about what it means to be human. Come join us as we learn to extrapolate science concepts and how to work them into our world to bring amazing new stories to life.

Can't make the class? Sign up and we will send you the class materials, recording and presentation slides to help you get started!

6/12 | 10:00 am – 1:00 pm | Sunday (1) | Fee: $39 | Rebecca Demarest | Online
